

WELCOME

We would love to encourage you to take in this day in an intentional way, making room for God to surprise you. We have been praying and fasting for this event and believe that it will not only impact each of our churches and communities, but that Jesus truly wants to speak to each of our hearts. Our prayer is that this will be a place where we can receive the renewal of the Holy Spirit and also give him permission to challenge us.

We are all learning together and as such we want to take this opportunity to also learn from each other. As we listen to legendary and experienced leaders, we invite you to see the leaders at their table. Each is experienced and legendary in their own right, and each has gold to offer us if we take the time to listen. We want to make room for God to speak not only from the platform, but also through the people around us because we believe He wants to surprise us with the friendships and words of encouragement that they have for us (and that we can also offer). We are so grateful for the blessing of your life and leadership, and it is truly an honor to welcome you today. Thank you for taking the time to be here and engage in these conversations with us.

Sincerely,

your Houses of Light family!

GROUP DISCUSSION GUIDELINES

We believe each person at this leadership summit has something of value to contribute. Our goal is that we would all learn and grow together as the Lord speaks to all of us through each speaker. The greatest impact for our lives and ministries comes not from attending a conference, but from the ways we allow the Lord to transform our hearts and take the initiative to act on what He says.

To make space for this kind of work to happen, we want to have times where we reflect and discuss what we are hearing as well as the opportunity to ask questions and get feedback from our peers. Our reflection time at our tables will be this space: one where we can process what God is saying to us and glean from the experiences and stories of the people around us. In order to steward this time well and get the most out of this conference, we ask that each participant of this summit joins us in our commitment to honor this time by:

Engaging in active listening

When others are sharing, we are committed to listening attentively, recognizing that their story matters. When anyone in the group is sharing, we will not have our phones out or tune out of the conversation. We will listen to them as we would want to be heard and wait until it is our turn to share about ourselves.

2 Honoring the time we have

This is a very full day, and we have so many amazing people here we want to hear from and learn from. We also understand that each of us has questions and testimonies we would love to share, but our time today is very limited. For this reason, we ask that each person takes the time to write down their questions as well as any feedback they would like to share with the group. When it is time to share, the best way to honor the time is to stick with what is written on the page and not divert from the subject at hand. Trust that your facilitator will ask you questions if clarification is needed.

3 Staying Positive

We understand that life in leadership can be challenging and there may not be many places where we as leaders can process our frustrations. We encourage you to take this opportunity to build friendships and connect with people to add to your support system as a leader. What we want to avoid is using this time to complain or vent about our ministries and/or the people in them. At the same time, we want to partner with the people at our tables in believing that change is possible, so we are committed to edifying them and asking clarification questions. We are not going to diagnose anyone's problem or declare them hopeless, instead we will partner with the Lord to declare life and growth in their ministries. Our goal is not to impress people with our own insight or intelligence, but to see what God wants to say to them and build their faith in the process.
